Feedback Guidelines

Providing feedback is a tricky business. Following the guidelines below should allow you to provide helpful, positive feedback to the caller. Be helpful not critical. You are not doing a critique.

1. Think positively. What did the caller do best? Don't compare the caller to other callers. Just compare the different areas for the one caller. Mark at least two or three items as "Best" first

2 What could the caller most improve? Select one item and mark that item. Then, if you can, make a suggestion that in your mind would help the caller improve in the "Suggestion for Improvement/Other" area. Use phrases like "I felt" or "In my opinion" to let the caller know you are only giving your opinion and others may have felt differently. If you don't have a suggestion, that's ok, just leave that section blank.

NEW CALLERS
Remember that any feedback on this form is strictly the opinion of the person who provided it and others may feel quite differently. People often see things differently. Also remember that the comments are not meant to be critical but only to help you achieve your goal of becoming a better caller.
